

Annie had a call nearly 3 hours long from Mary and Carrie Brier this afternoon. They pretty nearly talked her out.

We did not either of us think that it was at all a necessary thing to show them over the house as they were here at the Dime party, but they managed to suggest that they would like to see it. Tell Annie Head that I think she displays most excellent judgment in sending Annie light-reading. Tell us how your chairman treats you this term, whether he is good to you or not. I suppose you received your books.

We sent them. Annie seemed quite amused at your suggestion and calmly remarked that she used them and put them in the wash again.

Dear Millie
Niles Thursday

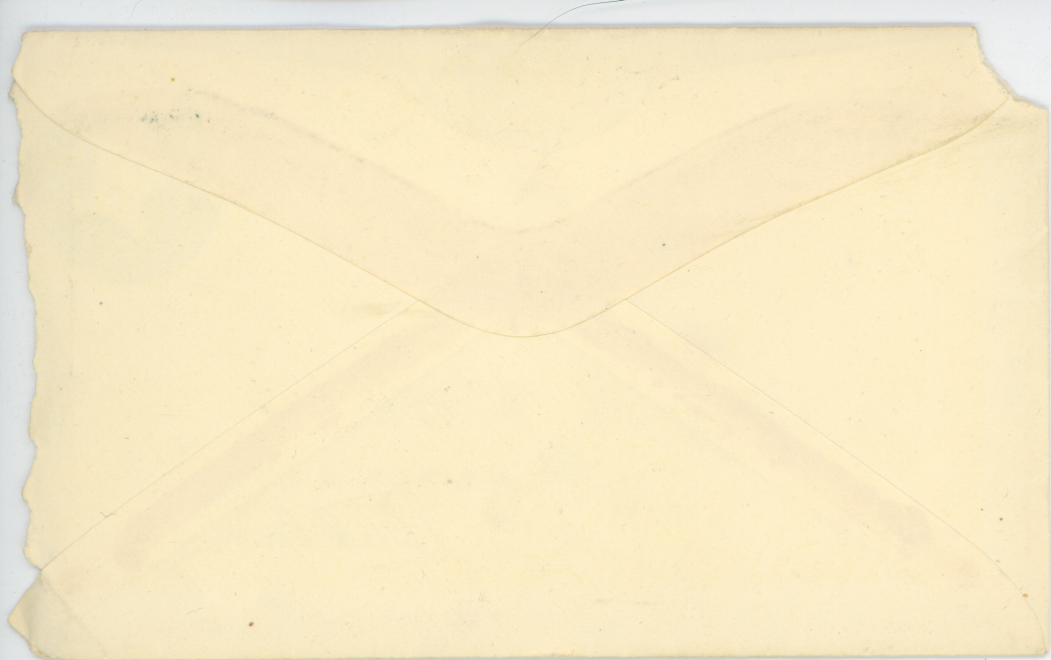

I wondered much that we did not hear from you last week but now that I know you have had dentistry on hand I understand. I am sorry you have had such a time, and wonder that you are not too nervous to study. I think you are heaving too much to do this year and should certainly advise you to give up something if there is anything you can. You cannot learn all there is to learn anyway and so there is no use to kill yourself in the attempt. We did have rain, not a big rain by any means, but enough to set things going again, and we are very busy.

Still it looks to me doubtful whether the sales will be as large as we would be glad to have them because it is getting on in the season.

We are beginning to fix things up in the yard. Annie staked out the roadway and part of the beds yesterday and has been making out a list of the things she wants in them. She is to have it all just exactly as she says. I have made a private arrangement with Papa to that effect. She seems in some respects better than she did, though that weather and the wet weather when she could not go out were hard for her.

I hope you were able to do Eddy some good with Mr.
Mc Chesney. I don't believe it would do him any good to put him back. He is constituted like his Mother and would go under, and not over a man. His Mother thinks he is doing better this term. What a consolation it is to her that Mattie stands so well.
I heard through Aunt Jennie that Miss Tichenor was very sick, congestion of the brain being one of her troubles.
Did you go up to the house when you were over?

You ought to go over once in awhile and spend Sabbath it would be a change and rest for you and do you good.
